A Characteristic Populistic Dicker.

When the Populist party reformed (?) Kansas it pulled the state educational institutions into politics. In selecting presidents and professors, politics, rather than reputation, was made a leading requirement, and Populists and teachers of socialistic leanings were imported into the state to run its state educational institutions. The people have not forgotten the scandal of the State Agricultural College. A public teacher's party predilections, like those of a preacher, should be the last thing taken into the account, if counted at all. His ability as an educator alone should be considered. It is now announced, or, rather, has leaked out that in the event of the election of Breidenbach, Stryker, the erratic state superintendent during the Leedy administration, is to be made president of the State Normal school at Emporia. This Stryker was a candidate before the Populist state convention at Fort Scott for state superintendent, and in falling of his aim and claim became very sore, so sore that the Pop nominees fearing that he would be lost to the party agreed that he should be rewarded as above, providing the Fusionists won. It has come to a pretty pass in politics when the education of our youth must hinge on the ambition of politicians.

Billy Boy Bryan as an Editor.

While editing the Omaha World-Herald in 1892, before he conceived the crown of thorns or dreamed of the possibility of his being chosen as a candidate for the anti-pension, anti-expansion party, Mr. Bryan wrote an editorial on pensions which can hardly fail to interest old veterans. The editorial appeared in that paper on the 18th of November of the above year. He having denied its authorship, the matter has been looked up, and it is found that Billy wrote it. Mr. George W. Wormald of Bellevue, Kentucky, writes the editor of the Eagle that he has a copy of the paper and that the editorial alluded to is word for word as follows, it being headed "A Great Deficiency."

"The next session of congress will have to wrestle with one deficiency of $36,000,000. This is on account of pensions. The appropriations for pensions for the next year must be not less than $150,000,000. It is, therefore, easy arithmetic to perceive that the appropriation that congress must make for pensions next session must aggregate not less than $186,000,000. This tremendous sum would, in itself, be enough to run a reasonable government. One would not complain if it were an honest debt, because it was never earned by any act of patriotism or heroic service. The government is held up and despoiled of no mean portion of this, and it seems helpless to defend itself. One can not help being curious to know how many more years it will take to exhaust the generation which feels itself injured by the war. It is safe to say that never did a generation display such remarkable longevity."

But There Is the Grave Danger.

Democratic writers and speakers keep on assuring their party that there is no danger of 36 to 1 in the election of Bryan for the reason that the Republican majority in the senate will not permit it, and that for the next four years the senate must remain Republican. In other words, the Democrats in their desire for the office are willing to take the chance of the Republican party saving the country from the harm threatened by the untold policies advocated by Bryan. But unlooked-for exigencies might change the political complexion of the United States senate. The south will remain solid and death and partisanship might intervene in some of two or three of the more close northern states like Indiana. Facts do not warrant the statement that it would be impossible for Mr. Bryan to do anything toward putting into operation his 16 to 1 theories, provided he were elected. If he set about to do it with the same insistence and the same disregard for the views of the Democratic party as he exhibited at Kansas City he could do a whole lot. There may be next year a sound money senate by a majority of six or ten, but when Cleveland was president after a two months' fight he wrung from a senate that had a large free silver majority the repeal of the Sherman silver law. As Cleveland subjugated the free silver senate, so Bryan might subjugate a sound money senate if he set his heart upon doing it. Then, even if he could not do that, he might cause his secretary of the treasury to pay the interest on the public debt only in silver dollars.

Chester Long's Big Compliment.

The national Republican central committee has issued its campaign hand-book, the first issues of which have reached the west. It is a very comprehensive affair, official, statistical and historical, containing a vast amount of political matter, editorials, parts of speeches and the like. Only two speeches of all the speeches made in congress on political questions are given in full and one of these is that of Chester I. Long of Kansas, on the Porto Rican question. The fact that his speech is regarded by the committee as the most important is a great compliment.

The Metropolis of Bryan's State.

Omaha has actually fallen off in population, according to the United States official returns. Omaha explains that they paid ten years ago. However that may be, Omaha has increased, and is increasing, in business, and rapidly of late. Her live-stock business is now greater than ever. Her bawled bones are forgotten and her wholesalers and jobbers are flourishing, and have been ever since the election of McKinley. According to information collected in that city, there has been a wonderful improvement in business since 1896, the lowest rate of increase being 10 per cent, and ranging from that up to 500 per cent. The increase in the number of employees ranges from 15 per cent to 20 per cent, and salaries paid have increased from 10 to 25 per cent. Furthermore, forty-five business reports an increase in the number of traveling men averaging about 50 per cent.

The conditions found in Omaha are not different from those existing in other cities, and, in fact, throughout the country. During the past four years there has been a return of prosperity which is simply unparalleled in the history of the country. Business of all kinds has become as it never boomed before, and nearly all the people have shared in this return of prosperity.

How will Bryan meet such facts? Four years ago he declared that if the gold standard were indurated hard times would grow harder and harder, the opportunities for employment would be destroyed, the farmer would find it more difficult to live, industry would be paralyzed, and the country generally would go to ruin. Of course, the people of Nebraska have remembered these prophecies of evil, and when Bryan goes on the stump this fall to tell them that the institutions of the republic are in peril they will recall what he said four years ago.

That Wichita Boy on the Walls of Pekin.

The Lawrence Journal observes that "while Kansas kickers are demanding that the flag be pulled down wherever it has been raised, Kansas boys continue to raise it and to defy the croakers. A Wichita boy was the first to scale the old Pekin wall and raise the Stars and Stripes where for thousands of years the dragon has grinned defiance at civilization. What a queer heart a man must have if it will not beat with pride at an achievement of that kind! And how one must hate himself after he declares that the banner must be pulled down because his party didn't place it there! That flag has carried with it even to the walls of the ancient city a guarantee of civilization and a promise of protection for all who seek its sheltering folds. One of these days when the opposition party gets cured of its virulent attack of the mulleritis it will be just as proud of the achievements of the American soldier as the rest of us are now."

The Biggest Locomotive Yet.

The new locomotive which has been built in Pittsburgh for service on one of the Carnegie lines is the biggest yet. Including the tender, it weighs 13 tons more than the largest locomotive ever built before, and exceeds all others in boiler capacity by 500 gallons. The total weight is 301,400 pounds. Its boiler capacity is 7,500 gallons. Exclusive of the tender, the engine weighs 250,300 pounds. The weight on the drive wheels is 225,200 pounds. Its heating surface is 3,354 square feet.

It is not for speed, but for power, that this monarch of the rail will be noted, as it is designed to haul heavy loads of ore over heavy grades. Nevertheless, this new gigantic locomotive, with its tender capable of holding 14 tons of coal at one time, cannot fail to attract widespread attention.

Department Store in London.

London is to have an American department store. Mr. F. H. Cooper, of Siegel & Cooper of New York and Chicago, is now in London arranging the details of the project. It is expected that the Londoners will fall over themselves on bargain days, and that the American firm will do a greater business than any of its competitors in that capital. Sir Thomas Lipton, the owner of the Shamrock, and a multi-millionaire, has decided to assist in financing the project. It is claimed that the new department store in London will be the largest in the world, and will be backed by abundant capital. The results of the experiment will be awaited with great curiosity, not to say anxiety, by the tradesmen of London, few of whom have learned of the advantages of doing business on the American plan.

Are Not Closing Down.

The New York Journal published a report that the W. L. Douglas shoe shops had "closed down, throwing thousands out of employment," and, of course, used it as an editorial text for an article showing that industry suffered under existing conditions. Mr. Douglas promptly replied to the false report, saying: "The Douglas factory is busily employed every day, running to its fullest capacity, with a full complement of skilled union shoemakers." The Journal acknowledged its error of fact, but made no correction of its misleading editorial comment. One of the manufactured calamity balloons of the anti-administrators are punctured.

Porto Ricans Like Office.

It is said that the Porto Ricans display a love for office which indicates that they will make exceptionally apt American citizens. It was feared at the time of the annexation of Porto Rico that the people did not appreciate the peculiar joys of an office-holding life and would be poor material for the political work which would be expected as soon as the duties and responsibilities of citizenship were conferred upon them. It seems, however, that the critics of the Porto Ricans were mistaken. Most of the men want office. They display as much longing for government jobs as the average Tammanyite, and everybody knows that nothing more could be expected.

Army Tents to be Relegated.

It is proposed in England to substitute papier-mache for canvas for officers' messes, canteens, etc., in home camps which are always at the mercy of high winds. The price of a building, well lighted and ventilated and draught-proof is £210, while the fittings bring up the cost to £270. In each hut ten men sleep, take their food, and in wet weather enjoy their indoor recreation without overcrowding. The huts are designed to suit all weathers. They can be built in three hours and taken to pieces in half the time.

The czar of Russia once decorated Wharton Barker with the cross of St. Stanislaus. A man can not hold a foreign decoration and be president of the United States. This settles Barker. He would have received fully 5,000 votes. He may now get only 4,000.

The three largest cities in the country are New York, with about 2,000,000; Chicago, with 1,600,000, and Philadelphia, with 1,200,000. Philadelphia, which is at last recovering from the Centennial boom, is making the greatest per cent of gain of the three.

The veterans of this country wanted to see McKinley at Chicago, but the veterans of this country, more than any other men realize what it means when a man must be on his post.

England and France are making faces at each other again. If war ever breaks out between them the French fleet will last only a few minutes longer than the Spanish fleet.

"I want," says Mr. Bryan, "a civilization that will give hope to the man who is driving the carriage as well as the man who is riding in it." In North Carolina, Mr. Bryan?

After his prize fight Fitzsimmons attended a dance. Mr. Fitzsimmons is undoubtedly right in not letting pugilism interfere with the social demands of his native.

This nation intends to withdraw from China, but it doesn't intend to have Russia or any other nation holding the door open for us before we are ready to go.

The average age of the surviving members of the G. A. R. is 65 years. The Civil war was an event of nearly half a century ago. It is hard to realize that.

Collis Huntington left little in his will to public institutions. Huntington was one man who resented the abuses rich Americans must be subject to.

If Russia and Germany and Japan have invited England and America to retire from China, the coming entertainment will contain fireworks.

Jeffries will have to come up to the scratch. Fitzsimmons has challenged him and he will become the best of pugilism if he doesn't accept.

In the last ten years the eastern part of the United States has grown more than the western. But this decade it is our turn.

If we hadn't attended to Spain she would now be in China strutting around like she could lick something. And there are others.

An Anarchist who wants to kill Bryan has been discovered. Barker and Debs should hide themselves quick.

We could gather Congress up under our arm and scot for home, but the whole world would laugh at us.

Omaha added her census in 1890 and had to pay for not being permitted to lie, in 1900.

Bryan is making a good many speeches in Nebraska for a man who is sure of his own state.

Romance of Brigand's Vendetta.

A story comes from the town of Tulsa, Oklahoma, that reads like some old Sardinian romance. For many years a brigand named Lachinski was the terror of the district lying between that town and Salina, at the mouth of the Danube, and the port of Kustendje and the Black Sea.

His tale was a curious one. Of good family, he fell madly in love with a beautiful Roumanian girl, the daughter of an officer. Refused by the girl's father, he attempted to shoot her, but was frustrated in the attempt, and during the fight which ensued he by mistake shot his sweetheart. He then avenged the death of his sweetheart by the death of the officer, and successfully the relations of the dead girl became his victims.

In vain police and military endeavored to hunt him out and take him alive or dead. In the fastnesses of the woody hills of the Dobrugea he hid himself, and there defied his would-be captors for years.

He gradually became a sort of modern Robin Hood, giving part of the proceeds of his brigandage to the peasantry, and in this way was always well informed of the movements of the armed parties engaged in the search for him.

So feared did he become that single persons began to be afraid to make the journey between the two cities of Constantza and Tulcea, and when carrying valuables always traveled armed and in parties. Nevertheless, Lachinski would often hold up his passengers and rob them, and his desperate deeds would make an exciting book.

Arrived to the teeth, he would suddenly appear among the trees on the roadside, and the slightest hesitation to his order to put all arms in a heap in the road brought a shower of bullets from his two Winchester carbines indiscriminately among the party.

The writer, when riding once from Tulcea to Tulcea, met a man and entered into conversation with him:

"You are English?"

"Yes."

"Ah, that is the land where one marries for love only, is it not so; and where parents do not interfere with the loves of their children?"

"Yes, that is so."

"Do you know why I ask?"

"No."

"Look and you will understand."

The man opened his coat, and in a cartridge belt were stuck four heavy revolvers, besides a knife. "I am Lachinski," he said, "and you belong to the class of the robber."

"I should probably have killed you! On your English word of honor do not say to any one you saw me. Good-night."

He turned into a path and some minutes later I met a party of mounted militia. "Had I met anyone?" "No, not for an hour."

"Good-night." "Good-night."

Later I met a postman thanking me. "I believe the man was actually watching, and within listening distance when the soldiers accosted me!"

Now, Lachinski was joined by two on the road, and he put some thirty cases of brigandage, generally coupled with murder of the victims.

In 1893 Rybachoff paid with his life for betraying Lachinski. He was murdered, no doubt, by one of the now disbanded brigands. They were never captured, although a strict search was made, and every individual being well known.

But at last for the murder of a Turkish woman, who, it is said, was in Rybachoff's service at the time of Lachinski's capture, a few months ago, nine men were arrested.

A little boy who had witnessed Rybachoff's murder was beaten by one of the brigands, and gave information against all the band. They are now all under arrest, and will, no doubt, pay for their misdeeds in the salt mines of Tuleia. But who knows whether this will be the end of the vendetta?

The Chinese Calendar.

Many perplexing problems were presented to Americans in the messages from Minister Conger, recently forwarded by the Chinese officials to the administration in Washington, but none is a greater Chinese puzzle to the average citizen than the problem of determining time according to the Celestial system. The Chinese have no use for the generally accepted calendar. They generally use the moon phase which appears in the message sent by the Tsung Li Yamen to the Chinese minister in Washington. This message began: "Your telegram of the fifteenth day of this month. Experts in the use of the Celestial calendar have been consulted what was meant by the 'fifteenth day of this month,' but they could become experts only after long and earnest study."

The Chinese month is the lunar month, consisting of twenty-nine or thirty days. A year may have twelve months and consist of 354 or 355 days, or it may have thirteen months and consist of 384 or 385 days. To bring the calendar year into accord with the solar year, the Chinese provide for an extra month every second or third year. This they call the "second third month," or the "second sixth month," as the case may be. With them an hour consists of 120 minutes. They have no weeks and are content to divide time into the twelve months, where the more modern nations find weeks very convenient in the division of time. The Celestials are satisfied if they can keep a third of a month in the month, and a third of a month in the month, and a third of a month in the month.

That there should be many odd features of the Chinese calendar is not surprising when one remembers that the yellow race still adheres to the system adopted in the year 220 B. C. Yoo, who was counted a wise ruler by his race, revised the calendar in that year. Discovering that time thereby was measured by the moon. In order to make the calendar accurate, he further provided that there should be seven extra months in the calendar of every nineteen years. As a result, Chinese time varies little more than an hour every nineteen years from the true time.

China is a country where the calendar is made by a method—first by circles of sixty years each, and second, by the reigns of the successive emperors. A Chinaman, in giving his age, may report that he was born on the tenth day of the third month, in the fifth year of Hsiao Tung, or in the fifty-second year of the cycle. That year corresponds to our own year 1895. As the third lunar month began in that year on April 11, the English equivalent for the tenth day of that month was April 25, 1895.

Another illustration of the oddity of the Chinese calendar is brought out in the dispatch from the Tsung Li Yamen. By our calculation the day to which he referred as "the fifteenth day of this month" was the eleventh day of the month.

Colonel Baden-Powell has a water dog, a flock of butterflies and a quarrelsome cat. These animals are always living together in perfect harmony, and the sparrow never has to be cautioned against eating his insect companions. Mrs. Baden-Powell's flock of butterflies consists of about 150 live specimens from Japan and India. She has reared them all from cocoons, and many of them have spread their wings.

Large as that of the old sparrow is, the sparrow and the butterfly are her constant companions.

According to the Courier, the Pawnee city council has done the commendable thing of appointing a man to look after the city's park.

Out in Custer county last week a vast cloud of grasshoppers preceded a thunderstorm. The hoppers probably are anarchy and object to baths.

George H. Coulson has been nominated for the council in the Eleventh district, by the Populists. In the last legislature Coulson had a contest and was beaten. Somer or later the cattleman and the farmer in Custer county are going to have it out. The fight has been made before in other places, and the farmers will win.

The El Reno News announces that it is going to make the hardest fight for its county ticket it knows how, but it positively will not go to the limit of vilification and abuse.

Orlando Herald: Born to Lew and Lettie Harman, of Okmuhll, a baby boy, the first boy of the town. A corner lot would be a nice present to the new-come. Don't you think so, Mr. Gus?

An evangelist named Culpepper told the people at Pawnee that he would rather have his boy "covered with any kind of ticks than politics. It is the surest way to political bankruptcy. By the way, they have no politics in China."

There are men in Custer county, Oklahoma, which will be vastly benefited by the Stillwell road, who insist that it will not be built. There are always men who say a thing can not be done because they don't know how they could do it themselves.

Billings News: Some miscreant drove into Dr. Kirkpatrick's orchard last week while the doctor and his wife were away at Perry, and stripped his grape vines and peach trees. The fruit was extra fine and just ready to pick. We have not heard whether the thief has been apprehended or not. It is estimated there were about fifteen bushels of choice fruit taken.

Bill Neff is a merchant of Okla. who does some unique advertising. Listen to him in the Okla. Times: "Remember, Bill wishes everyone well. Narrow-minded people hate to see their fellow man prosper, and sometimes hate to see Bill make a sale. Bill has friends, and lots of them, and such little talk only makes the man who has an ax to grind look like a punched penny in a contribution box."

Of the present water furnished the citizens of Arkansas City, the traveler says: "The city bought a gold brick, as is evidenced by the slimy fluid which is now being forced down the throats of those who decline to drink beer or pay for Geoda water."

The open waist terror still spreads. Black lace has now been discarded and netting substituted. The netting has increased big enough for a house to crawling through. Most Kansan men hold their breath every time they step out on the street nowadays.

It is told by the Kansas City Times that one Ingalls went to Ottawa to make a speech. Curly Harrison was county chairman, and when Ingalls arrived, asked him quietly not to skin the Democrats. "Why, Ingalls, how do you say to the audience: 'Upon my arrival here today the chairman of your Republican committee look me aside and told me what I should say to you? But I'll follow his instructions.' Shall you say 'I please.' And he jumped into the Democratic fortwith."

Kansas City Times: Congressman Brooker, chairman of the Populist state committee, says it is Mr. Bryan's wish that the Populist leaders Mr. Stevenson for vice president. He said to me Thursday," says Mr. Edgley, "that he does not want to go into the White House with a Republican vice president. The Kansas members of the committee have been instructed to vote for Stevenson, and while I am hopeful, yet I fear Butler may use his position and the power of his office to beat us." Mr. Edgley added that he was sure there are two tails to the Bryan ticket, or if the Populists leave the second place blank, the Kansas electors will be called upon individually to make a statement of how they will vote on the vice presidency in the electoral college. This will simplify the matter, but other states having two sets of Bryan electors based on one, will be compelled to fight it out as best they can.

RIPANS

A practical journalist, long a member of the staff of the Washington Evening Star, resigned his position to go to Guatemala. Before he left Washington he had been a firm believer in the medicinal qualities of Ripans Tablets, and took a lot of them with him to Guatemala, where he earned the friendship of the captain of the steamer, which sails from San Francisco and stops at ports in Central America, by making known to him the marvelous virtues of R-I-P-A-N-S, the medical wonder of the century. He often dilates upon the captain's enthusiasm about the Ripans Tablets, and asserts that the people of the tropics suffer terribly from indigestion, and that the Tablets are now known most favorably throughout Central America. Ripans Tablets quiet the nerves, compose the mind, allay irritation and invite repose. One gives relief.
